Please complete the following information. In order to comply with Internal Revenue Service Code Sections relating to the filing of information returns (forms 1099), we are required to keep on file your taxpayer identification number and the type of business entity you operate. This applies even if your business is exempt from receiving 1099 returns. Failure to provide your TIN may subject you to a $50 IRS penalty under Section 6723. Also, federal law requires us to withhold 30% from your payments if you fail to provide your TIN or if you are subject to backup withholding. Federal law on backup withholding preempts any state or local remedies, such as any right to a mechanic's lien. Backup withholding is not a failure to pay you. It is an advance tax payment. You should report all backup withholding as a credit for taxes paid on your federal income tax return.
