

Wrong place, wrong time!

Accidents can happen. Great American Environmental can help protect against a number of potential risks and exposures for manufacturing facilities. These claims scenarios demonstrate potential situations where GLIDER can provide robust protection for both general liability and pollution liability.

Manufacturing Claims Scenarios

Pollution

Pollution Incident from Tank Failure

A storage tank containing a chemical solvent ruptures overnight, leaking into the stormwater system and contaminating a nearby creek. The company faces environmental cleanup costs and regulatory fines.

Contaminated Waste Discovery During Expansion

While excavating land for a new production wing, workers uncover buried drums of hazardous waste from a previous operation. The site is shut down for remediation, delaying construction and incurring significant environmental liability.

Transportation-Related Pollution

A truck transporting waste solvents overturns on a highway, spilling contents into a drainage system. Emergency response and environmental cleanup costs are incurred, along with potential third-party claims.

General Liability

Third-Party Contractor Injury

A subcontractor performing electrical work falls from scaffolding due to improper anchoring. The contractor is not covered under workers' comp, leading to a third-party liability claim against the facility.

Forklift Accident – Property Damage

A forklift operator accidentally backs into a vendor's parked vehicle during unloading, causing damage to the vehicle.

Product Damage Post-Distribution

A manufactured part used in HVAC systems fails, causing water damage in a commercial building.

GLIDER combines traditional Commercial General Liability (CGL) coverage with site-specific pollution legal liability, contractor's pollution liability, and transported cargo pollution coverage. It's a comprehensive solution for businesses needing both general liability and environmental risk protection.
